Convention on the conditions of transparency and quality assurance for automatic recognition of higher education qualifications in Europe

The scope of the Convention will be defined by the Drafting group

Automatic recognition will refer to the right of a qualification holder to have their degree recognised at the corresponding level without the need for a separate recognition procedure. Automatic recognition thus means there is no formal assessment procedure for the purpose of (generic) recognition. It promotes and facilitate student mobility and international cooperation and reduces administrative barriers for qualification holders.

The Convention

The proposed Convention will lay the foundations for automatic recognition by ensuring that all Parties meet the essential standards of transparency, quality assurance and data reliability that underpin mutual trust

Will apply to qualifications belonging to the three higher education cycles as defined within the European Higher Education Area, while leaving admission decisions fully within the autonomy of higher education institutions.

The Convention will apply to academic recognition and will not extend to professional recognition or regulated professions.

Building blocks

Ratification and implementation of the Lisbon Recognition Convention, compliance with Bologna structural reforms, and full transparency of higher education systems

Quality assurance: full alignment with European Standards and Guidelines, recognising that trust in quality assurance is inseparable from trust in qualifications

Qualifications frameworks: States Parties must operate national qualifications frameworks referenced to the QF-EHEA and EQF, ensuring the comparability of levels and learning outcomes

Transparency, participation, and integrity. This includes the Diploma Supplement, effective credit transfer systems, academic freedom, measures against academic fraud and ethical standards in higher education management.
